

New book helps companies choose the right proof of delivery system

For Immediate Release

15th June, 2009

Do you want to know how to choose the right proof of delivery system for your business?

The Proof of Delivery Buyer's Guide explains what a proof of delivery system can provide for your business, helps you evaluate the systems available in the market and gives you the information to avoid the pitfalls and common mistakes that people and companies make when buying proof of delivery systems.

The Proof of Delivery Buyer's Guide is written by industry specialist Michael Boxwell. Over the past twenty years, Michael has provided consultancy on hand held computer systems for over sixty companies, including major multinationals like Fed Ex, DHL, Coca-Cola and Prudential, three European post offices and several courier companies.

“The Proof of Delivery Buyer's Guide has been written to help both IT professionals and business managers select the right proof of delivery system for their business,” says Michael Boxwell. “It gives the reader the information they need to know when dealing with suppliers, enabling them to ask the right questions and ensuring they select the right system for their business.”

The Proof of Delivery Buyer's Guide is available on Amazon or from all good book sellers. It is published by Code Green Solutions and is priced at £9.99.
